CHRISTMAS APPEAL TO THE
PEOPLE OF ONTARIO
FOR
The Hospital for Sick Children

Dear Mr. Editor:—
It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done by the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, in a few words, tell you of the steady growth of this Hospital.
In the year 1875 there were only six cots and beds, one nurse, 44 in-patients and 67 out-patients. In 1912 there were 250 cots and beds, 64 nurses, 1,294 in-patients and 17,862 out-patients.
During the 37 years of the Hospital's existence, 19,370 in-patients have been admitted, and 133,724 out-patients have been treated, a total of 153,094, or an average of 4,138 per year. Of the 19,370 in-patients, 5,495 were from places outside of Toronto. 9,644 of the total in-patients were cured, and 5,711 were improved. This is a great record.
Of the 1,294 in-patients last year, 341 came from 218 places outside of Toronto, so that the Hospital is not a local, but a Provincial Institution.
In the Orthopedic Department in 37 years, nearly 700 boys and girls have been treated for clubfeet, and about 600 were corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto, so surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.
The Corporation of Toronto grants $25,000, not only for the city children, but towards the maintenance of all patients in the Hospital, and the citizens of Toronto donate an average of $15,000 annually to the funds of the Hospital.

Will you, kind reader, think of what your money will do? It helps to restore health and strength, and gives sound limbs and straight feet to crippled boys and girls.
Remember that your pocket-book must be the Hospital's friend, if the Hospital is to be the children's friend.
Remember that Christmas calls you to open the purse of your kindness to the Hospital, so that the Hospital may open the heart of its help to the children.
Remember that your money can help the Hospital build a bridge over which the feet of little children may travel on the journey from sorrow to joy, from sickness to health—aye, from death to life.
Please send a dollar, or more if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or J. Ross Robertson, Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

Ontario Act respecting truancy and compulsory attendance at school:

"Every child between eight and fourteen years of age shall attend school for the full term during which the school of the section or municipality in which he resides is open each year, unless excused for the reasons hereinafter mentioned.

1. A parent or guardian or other person shall not be liable to any penalty imposed by this Act in respect of a child if:

1. The child is under efficient instruction at home or elsewhere.

2. The child is unable to attend school by reason of sickness or other unavoidable cause.

3. The child has been excused by a Justice of the Peace or by the principal of the school where the child is entitled to attend.

4. The child has passed the entrance examinations for high school, prescribed by the regulations.

No child under the age of fourteen years, who has not a valid excuse under this Act, shall be employed by any person during the school hours, which the public school of the section or municipality in which the child resides is in session, and any person employing a child in contravention of this section shall incur a penalty not exceeding twenty dollars for each offence.

A parent, guardian, or other person having the charge or control of any child between the age of eight and fourteen years, who neglects or refuses to cause such child to attend some school, unless the child is excused from attendance as provided by this Act, shall incur a penalty of not less than five dollars or more than twenty dollars."

This law in the future will be strictly enforced.

President Somers, of the Toronto Board of Trade, returning from a lengthy trip to England, says Canada's credit has been severely affected by fraudulent booming of town lots in the west. Many people were prevail- ed upon to buy the lots ten miles from obscure villages with the idea that they had all the town improvements. Mr. Somers criticized the Canadian immigration officers methods in the old country saying the best of the immigrants were getting away into South Africa, Australia and other colonies.

W. C. T. U.

On Thursday evening, Nov. 21st, Mrs. Gibson, president of the Napanee W. C. T. U., entertained the members of that organization and their friends at a Parlor Social in her home. The evening was very pleasantly spent. Mrs. Gibbard was in the chair and the meeting was opened by all joining in singing the familiar old hymn "All Hail the power of Jesus' name." Afterward the Rev. Mr. Sellery read a lesson, upon which he made some very appropriate comments, and then he lead in prayer. Mrs. A. W. Grange read a very interesting paper on the general aims of the W. C. T. U. work and some of the things accomplished by the Napanee branch. Mrs. Laidley gave an excellent report of the W. C. T. U. Convention held recently in Renfrew. A short address on the Enfranchisement of Women was also delivered in which emphasis was laid upon the fact, that in order to compass moral reforms, women must vote. The music for the evening was ably furnished by the quartette of Grace Methodist Church. After the pro- gramme was completed, Mrs. Gibson ministered most effectively to the inner man of her guests. An announce- ment was made to the effect that there would likely be a succession of Parlor Socials in connection with the W. C. T. U. and certainly if one may judge from the first of the series, they should be a means of increasing interest in that organization.

NATURE'S ESSENCE... Extracted From Forest Plants.

Nature's laws are perfect, but disease follows if these laws are not obeyed. Go straight to nature for the cure, to the forest; there are mysteries here that we can fathom for you. Take the bark of the wild-cherry tree, the root of mandrake, stone, Oregon grape root, queen's root, bloodroot and golden seal, make a scientific, non-alcoholic extract of them with just the right proportions and you have Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It took Dr. Pierce, with the assistance of two learned chemists, eight years of hard work experimenting to make this pure glyceric extract and alternative of the greatest efficiency and without the use of a particle of alcohol.

Just the sort of remedy you need to make rich, red blood, and cure that lassitude and feeling of nerve exhaustion. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery bears the stamp of PUBLIC APPROVAL and has sold more largely in the past forty years than any other blood purifier and stomach tonic.

"Some time ago I got out of health—my stomach seemed to be the seat of the trouble," writes MR. EZRA WILLIAMS, of Belleville, Kans. "I commenced to doctor with all the doctors at home as well as with other specialists on stomach and digestive organs. None seemed to do any good—in fact, most of the medicines did me harm. Finally, I wrote to Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., who replied, stating that I had liver complaint with indigestion and constipation, and advised Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets.'"

"The 'Discovery' and 'Pellets,' have 'put me on my feet again'—seemed to be just what I needed. I could not have recovered without them."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are for liver ills.

O, HAPPY LAND!

In Australian Wilds Scolding Can Be Stopped.

When she begins, crescendo, to tell you what she thinks of you, out of the limitless wealth of her acquaintance with your character during the term of your married life, you know what is coming. You either light a cigar, like a sensible husband and do a marathon; or you sit there, mum-chance, until you simply can't stand it any longer, and explode into something which, as she expressly informs you, is more than sufficient ground for divorce, with an alimony that'll put a crimp into any more gadding to lunch with handsome blond customers.

Is there no hope? Men, there is. Where all others failed, explorers of the wild of far Australia have brought back joyful news.

A little co-operation, a mere tribal, and you can make a woman hold her tongue until the warmest depth of the warmest place you so loyally keep from wishing her in is frozen over and fit for skating.

Where all men has to do is to say to his wife, in the Warrirramunga—doesn't it sound fine?—language:

"Shut up!"

That's all. He doesn't have to bat her over her oratorical head with a club; he needn't appeal to the sympathetic mother-in-law of reality, who cutes husbands more often than the humorists let us surmise. He simply, says, "Shut up!" and she shuts.

Oh, woman in your hours of ease the hardest in the world to please, can you conceive of any land of people under whose sky the priceless privilege of your sex has been abandoned at the behest of that pitiless tyrant man? Yet it is true. Men's eyes have seen this marvelous thing; men's ears have strained in vain to hearken to the protest of the afflicted and the oppressed.

There are two of them, Englishmen, named Baldwin Spencer and F. J. Gillen, and they made a journey across Australia in the doubtful expectation of coming across some discovery or other which would let them lay claim to the immortal fame that goes to persons who beat Marco Polo and Munchausen, and can prove it.

When Messrs. Spencer and Gillen encountered the Warrirramunga, in Australia's innermost wilds, and found half the women acting as if they were stricken dumb, they suspected they Ancient Puffs and Switches.

The Greek, Egyptian, Carthaginian and Roman ladies of twenty-five centuries ago made us of the most astonishing quantities of borrowed hair, and the Roman women of the time of Augustus were especially pleased when they could outdo their social rivals by piling upon their heads a greater tower of additional tresses. They also arranged curls formally around the head. An extensive commerce in human hair was carried on, and after the conquest of Gaul blond hair such as grew originally on the heads of German girls along the Rhine became very fashionable in Rome. Caesar did not disdain to mix a little commercialism with his military enterprises and collected a vast amount of hair from the vanquished Gauls, which he sent to market at Rome, and in the Roman provinces a cropped head was regarded as a badge of slavery or at least of subjection. The hairdressers of Rome were persons of real importance and charged exorbitant prices for forming the hair into fanciful devices, such as harps, wreaths and diadema. —New York Herald.

The Prince's Majority.

The famous "mad" king of Bavaria, Louis II., and Prince Otto, his brother, were brought up with great strictness and simplicity. Their father, Maximilian II., an excellent constitutional king, but in private life not particularly genial, allowed them no pocket money but what they earned by good marks at their lessons, on the modest scale of 1 pfennig per mark, and he would fine them a thaler without compunction if they were reported idle. Their table was more frugal than that of the sons of most country gentlemen. When Louis attained his majority at eighteen he was provided with an establishment of his own and sat down on the first day of his emancipation to his usual dinner—one dish of meat and some cheese.

"Am I now my own master?" he asked with a smile of his servants.

"Yes, sir," was the answer.

"Then," said the prince gleefully, "you may bring me some chicken and a mehlspaisen (pudding)."

PRESS COMMENTS.

Toronto Globe—Fifty thousand people heard the bar denounced in Toronto on Sunday. Sir James may be over-confident in assuming that Toronto will support him in saving the bar.

London Free Press—The trouble with so much of the giving is that we give to those who do not need gifts of the cost and trouble that our gifts entail, while we fail to give where our little sacrifices would count for something. We are afflicted with "useless giving."

Collingwood Bulletin—A Barrie citizen had to pay $3 for allowing his hens to tear up his neighbor's lawn and flowers despite repeated protests. Served him right. There are few things more annoying than to see one's work utterly set at naught by the poultry or dogs of a neighbor. The fine should have been heavier.

Hamilton Times—However much we may trust in the sagacity, honesty and foresight of our leaders, we believe it would be but right that the party should have an opportunity to express an opinion upon these and other public questions. Then, win or lose, there could be no regret as to the policy after the battle was over.

Dundas Banner—It is difficult for these interests to get to the representative who is in politics for the honor alone and possessed with the desire to render his constituents and this country the very best possible service. But the politician with no visible means of support but his Government indemnity is a shining mark, because he needs the money and is usually in the business for the money he needs.

Brandon News—The Minister of Finance is reported as having assured the electors in Hochelaga that Premier Borden has been throughout consistent in his attitude on the naval question. Most people will be of the opinion that Mr. Borden has been consistent only in maintaining his privilege to change his mind as often as he pleases, a privilege generally supposed to belong exclusively to members of the fair sex.

Brantford Expositor—The doings of the Roblinites in the Macdonald bye-election must have been pretty vile when a Presbyterian Synod meeting at Brandon should see fit to unanimously pass a resolution deploring the prostitution of justice to personal or party ends, as also the tramping under foot of the sacred rights of citizens to individual liberty and fair trial, which occurred in that contest. A victory which has cost the victors the respect of right-minded men of both political parties is too dearly purchased.

Montreal Gazette—The marriage law, it is declared, may be the subject of discussion at the coming session of Parliament, in connection with a bill to make it a criminal offence to promulgate any church rule which may be used to attack the validity of a marriage. It is not a wholesome procedure to make the promulgation of a man's ideas about a solemn and widely effective ceremony a ground for criminal prosecution. In Good Appetite.

When Messrs. Spencer and Gilling encountered the Warramungas, in Australia's innermost wilds, and found half the women acting as if they were stricken dumb, they suspected they were in the presence of some marvel. They hastened to get the Warramunga population with the goods, by photographing the women, not only in the act of silence, but also in the instant when they were released from their horrible ban. The joyous emancipation came when her husband placed his right hand before her mouth, and, with a peculiar gesture, moved it to show that she was once more free to speak.

Those ignorant savages, in their simple, innocent way, had eliminated the source of a marital misery—is the testimony of the age and the sages counts—with neatness and despatch. Yet they were merciful withal. Not lightly did they put on the ban. While it was employed for the more exasperating occasions of domestic life in dire extremity, as when Oscar J. Warramunga refused to stand for his Annabelle's kicks on the subject of rabbit for three meals a day, the formal occasion for its enforcement was when death came into the tribe. If four men, one in every class into which the tribe was divided happened to die within a short time, the man put the silence ban on every woman in their district. And not until the formal release was gestured did a single woman in the lot dare utter a syllable.

Thus, in Warramunga, the eternal problem has been solved. Thus, too, is man provided food for thought during that vacuous period of the curtain lecture, when he wishes his wife were somewhere, but remains too thoughtful of her comfort to be specific as the locality he may have in mind. Well after this discovery has been bruited about generally, the women who, while she jaws, is tortured with the doubt that he is wishing she is elsewhere, and feels sure in her own soul that she knows exactly where, can take heart in the thought that it may not be as bad as she surmises. He may only be wishing her in Warramunga.

By the way, the two travelers noticed that, while the women of Warramunga didn't dare open their mouths so long as the ban lasted, they did the finest lot of talking ever seen with their fingers.

Meredith and Women Suffrage.

George Meredith, whose letters have just been published was one of the pioneers of woman suffrage in England and unlike Browning he retained his belief in the movement to the end. Mr. Herbert Paul considers that the greatest service Meredith's books rendered, apart from their literary value, is their exaltation of women in the economy of the world. The effect of his belief in the possible enlargement of women's sphere, and the development of their powers, was all the greater because it was subtle, because it reached the public through a few minds to whom Meredith at once appealed, and because it inspired confidence in women without parading their claims. The comparative freedom and independence which women now enjoy is due more to Meredith than to Parliament or to Mill.

Suicides at $100 Each.

A gentleman who lived a number of years in the city of Amoy, in China, told me that he could secure any number among the common people of that town to commit suicide for $100 apiece. As human nature is the same everywhere, he explained that as we may find many who will lay down their lives for their country and whom we highly honor on that account, so an ordinary Chinaman is willing thus to die for the benefit of his children in order that they may worship him afterward as an ancestor who died for their benefit. This explains also that noble reverence for their parents which the Chinese display, because their parents will soon be endowed with all the mysterious powers of the next world.—W. H. Thomson, M. D., LL.D., in "Life, Death and Immortality."

Granulated Butter.

The Chinese preserve their eggs indefinitely by drying them, the yolks and whites being first separated and then each reduced to powder by evaporation. In India butter is treated in much the same way, so that it never becomes stale and may be kept fresh for a hundred years. The butter is boiled till all the water and curds are got rid of and nothing remains but clear oil. When the oil cools into a solid it is granulated and in this form will remain fresh indefinitely. This is what they call ghee, and ghee is nothing more or less than dried butter.—Chicago Journal.

ceedure to make the promulgation of a man's ideas about a solemn and widely effective ceremony a ground for criminal prosecution. Parliament, which has much business to call for its attention, and which should by this time be somewhat wearied with what is not its affair, will do well by giving the proposition, if it comes up, a speedy death.

Winnipeg Free Press—If the Government were to declare—as it should—that its policy is to permit the continued free importation of lumber in its first stage of manufacture—that is, rough lumber—would the lumber interests of British Columbia take an appeal to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council from the recent decision of the Supreme Court? This is a fair question, and the answer to it is not difficult. If the appeal is made it can only mean that the Government has given the lumbermen private assurances that if they win in London the duty thus imposed by a new interpretation of an old law shall be permitted to remain to the detriment of the lumber users of the west. No other interpretation of their action would be creditable to their reputation as business men.

Murger's Last Words.

In the diary of Baron d'Amboise, published as "The Intimate Memoirs of Napoleon III.," is this entry for January, 1861:

"I was with Aime Millet (the sculptor), who was the last that spoke to him (Murger, the writer). And what do you think he said to Millet? 'Mind you . . . there are only three things in life—friendship, love and'—He could not finish, he was choking . . . The man fell silent awhile, then went on again, fascinated, 'Friendship—love'—I wish I knew what the third thing was."

One Universal Symbol.

"Scientists at work on a universal language have one symbol to start with that already has the same meaning the world over," a traveler said. "That is the skull and crossbones. Its speech is even more universal than music or money. Musical values differ in different countries, as does money, but from one end of the earth to the other a skull and crossbones means poison."—New York Times.

Sharks Spoil Fishing.

The valuable pilchard fishery on the Cornish coast has been brought to a standstill by the unwelcome of a number of huge white and the officer representing fish fisheries, and Commanders, of the Coastguard Service arrived to assist in the working out these monsters. A fisherman gives a graphic account of an effort to capture. He says: "When some twenty-two of the Wolf Lighthouse men drove a harpoon into a shark at once made off at great speed, let out our fifty fathoms of manilla rope, and, hoping to master back, kept the engine at full speed. Our plan was the fish. But the plan was our power to carry out. Or went the shark, harpoon and wound notwithstanding, till the fish snapped the rope as a male of twine."

The Literary Obeisance.

Rossmore Stories.

Here are some stories from Lord Rossmore's new book:

"Percy La Touche is the leading sportsman of Ireland. He has a keen sense of humor, and when the late King once playfully hit him over the shoulders with his walking-stick he turned to his majesty and said, in rather rueful manner: 'Sir, I don't know whether you've knighted me or broken my collar-bone.'"

"The late King was a great stickler about the proper 'get up' for the races. At Epsom by some oversight I was not wearing the silk hat demanded by etiquette. The prince looked at me critically from top to toe, and said, half in jest and half in reproach: 'Well, Rossmore, have you come r-r-rattin'?'"

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

Very Few Women Understand the Art of Picture Framing.

SIMPLE MOUNTINGS BEST.

Pretty New Crochet Hand Bags Done In an Imported Aluminium Thread That Looks Like Dull Silver—Egg Scissors For Table Service.

My Dear Elsa—I don't think there is one woman in ten—the average person, I mean—who has the faintest idea what kind of pictures to hang on her walls, and if she is happy in the selection of prints or canvases she falls hopelessly down when it comes to framing them.

In most cases the frame is purchased entirely independently of the picture, often at some large store, whose framing department is run on the same lines as those devoted to gowns and provisions. Occasionally it happens that an unusual degree of intelligence on the part of the salesman leads at least to the tone of the frame being selected more or less in harmony with that of the picture, but it is seldom indeed that the subject is given much consideration.

A picture frame maker evolves what appears to him a particularly attractive frame, and straightway it is adopted for Corots, Rembrandts and Burne-Joneses alike.

It is a fairly safe theory to lay down that water colors look best in gold frames, but the width and design of these naturally vary with the subject. If the picture be low in tone it will be generally found that it will bear a broad mount, also of gold, and a somewhat bold frame. But if the color be vivid and the drawing not too detailed the frame had best be simple and the mount discreet. In such cases the narrow, rounded molding, decorated at the corners with a well molded shell or a delicate spray of flowers, is often charming.

For engravings dark wood is preferable to gilding, although in a few exceptional instances the latter is permissible. Frames of polished walnut, standing at an obtuse angle to the picture are usually safe. There should be a marked absence of carving, but the narrowest of gilt may make its appearance on the inside. Oak also has its merits, but in the majority of cases it is too cold in tone. There are, on the other hand, certain tints of photographic reproduction with which it is in harmony.

This picture framing talk is the result of a round of calls and the observation of the pictures hung in the rooms of the acquaintances visited.

which in most cases were unforgivably bad in their framing qualities, and often in the subjects selected. I really think one can gain a truer insight into the character of a person by the pictures they allow to hang on their walls than by many other and so called better methods. At any rate, it is a favorite test of mine that usually turns out creditably to my womanly intuition. Here endeth the framing lesson.

Didn't you dislike to give up carrying your pretty hand bag of lilac crochet when the cool weather came? I did, and there are evidently a great many more women of the same mind, for there are crochet bags in the shops made like the Irish one, which are carried out in a dull silver thread. This aluminium thread is imported from Germany and resembles dull silver. It is very light and guaranteed not to tarnish. Bags made of this are for shopping or small change, or for one's opera or party bag. Any of these bags can be had finished or done to order, or, better still, one may purchase the thread by the spool and crochet them oneself.

Finished with German silver or aluminium tops these bags cost, large size, $15.50. Small sizes are less expensive, but as it takes but three spools of the thread to crochet the bag and the thread is but 40 cents a spool it is far more profitable to crochet them oneself. As you crochet so beautifully I thought the suggestion would be a good one when you are working at your Christmas gifts. Tops for the bags may be purchased and added at home. For the opera bag a heavy cord is used to pull it together at the top instead of the metal fastener. The thread is so thin and pliable that the daintiest, frailest work may be wrought from it. Even trimmings for winter gowns are being made from this silver thread, and on a gray frock it would be lovely, wouldn't it?

Another oddity, I might call it, is to be found in the housekeeping department of the large shops this season—egg scissors. I know that you and a great many people think that the only way to eat a boiled egg is in its shell. You also are aware of the sad accidents that happen when one performs this part of table etiquette in an awkward fashion. To obviate these misadventures fascinating egg scissors have been invented for table service. Each pair of scissors is in the form of a gay little chicken. Each has a ruby eye, and the steel is gilded. The finger loops of the scissors are left the natural steel color for contrast, and the size is about five inches long. They are delightful for an invalid's breakfast tray and very tidy as well as cute for a child, though their use is becoming general whenever the boiled egg appears. They are only 65 cents apiece, and if you would like to have several of these novelties send a commission to

A THOROUGH SERVICE FROM ST. PAUL TO EDMONTON PLANNED

C.P.R. SAID TO BE PROJECTING LINE OF VAST IMPORTANCE TO WESTERN CANADA.

It is reported that the C. P. R. bridge across the Saskatchewan river at Outlook, Sask., has been completed and that a thorough service from St. Paul to Edmonton via Moose Jaw and Kerrobert will be installed shortly.

This line will be a great boom to the district through which it passes, which is one of the richest in western Canada.

Many new towns along this line, now practically unheard of will grow rapidly into prominence as the centers of their farming communities.

The town most affected by this thorough service will be Kerrobert, the main divisional point between Moose Jaw and Edmonton.

The growth of Kerrobert has always been remarkable and with the advantages of this service bids fair to enter the ranks of the leading centers of the west. 513

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

MANY a pretty girl grows into an ugly woman, which may account in part for the prevalence of the divorce habit.

There are people who think that one good turn deserves two others.

Plty the poor millionaire. He never knows the joys of having the rent paid and the winter's coal in.

A woman may not be able to throw a stone or sharpen a pencil, but what does that matter if she can use powder effectively?

If it is a woman's first duty to be beautiful, there are lots of women in the world who should be prosecuted for neglect of duty.

About the only stir that some people make in the world is when their funeral procession blocks traffic.

It is hard for a woman to keep a thankful spirit when the woman across the street has just bought the hat she wanted for herself.

OUR PATENT OFFICE

It Has Seen 150,000 Entries
Thirty-Eight Years.

Since the Canadian Patent Office was established in 1874, one hundred and fifty thousand have been registered.

At first the annual registrations were few in number, but they have increased year by year since that time.

It is expected that for 1912 there will be ten thousand more.

This number includes not only inventions of mechanical contrivances, but also improvements on the old, but processes, chemical and mechanical.

According to the Canadian law, patents will only be issued for inventions as are "new and useful."

Some of them, of which mention a few, barely come within this category. Of late years there has been more strictly applied formerly and patents for "inventions" have been more difficult to obtain and less often given.

An Italian inventor, named Bortini, took out a patent for a method of transmitting by telegraph. The method is ingenious and has probably as an assistance in the transmission of criminals. It is laborious, and for this reason has so far been of limited application.

From the original picture a graph is taken, using a lens magnifying power and passing the rays through a square and through a netting. The netting is such that the black dots of the original picture are so arranged as to be individually examined. The shape determined with the eye. The dots are then transferred into a code previously upon, and telegraphed to the receiving station.

There they are translated and positions. By photographing a condensing lens of suitable original picture is almost exactly reproduced.

An eggshell remover is an invention worthy of our attention. It grips tightly one end of an egg, a perforation in the egg and by forcing in air the contents are ejected.

Another curious device, designed for the purpose of helping out the teacher, is an instrument for penmanship. It is of simple construction, being merely a body oval in shape and of a size it may be comfortably held in the hand. Wire fixtures hold the pen in the proper position for writing.

An arm rest for typists, an invention of twenty years ago, was a device which failed to respect which seemed to be it. It was suspended from bands of elastic material tied in loops. The arms are passed through the loops and are supported and in this way do not tire.

Of still more ancient date is the invention of an envelope of shape. It was put upon the market by a German inventor but was not successful. Instead of being rectangular in shape, it was made the top than at the bottom, facilitating the insertion of the paper.

To the billiard expert a table invented by the inventor "new and improved" but offering many complex comparisons to the orthodox would perhaps be interesting.

BEWARE OF BLOOD-POISON

Zam-Buk is a Sure Cure.

Mr. James Davey, of 786 Ellice Ave., Winnipeg, says:—"A few months since I was cured of a poisoned finger through the timely use of Zam-Buk."

"I cut a deep gash across the knuckle on the first finger of my right hand in opening a lobster can. I suffered at the time with the soreness and pain, but had no idea it would become a serious wound. However, in about two days I was greatly alarmed, as my whole hand and arm to the elbow became suddenly inflamed, and the finger was much discolored, showing signs of blood-poisoning. The pain was dreadful and I was forced to leave off work and go home."

"The wound on the knuckle had been poisoned by dust and dirt getting into it. I then decided to start the Zam-Buk treatment, and having first bathed the cut, I applied the healing balm. It soothed the pain almost instantly, and by next day there was a great improvement."

"In a week's time, through perseverance with this wonderful preparation, a complete cure was brought about."

Zam-Buk is just as good for eczema, ulcers, scalp sores, abscesses, piles, ringworm, boils, varicose ulcers, running sores, cold sores, chapped hands, etc. It draws all poisonous foulness from a wound or sore and then heals. Use it, too, for cuts, burns, bruises and all skin injuries. Zam-Buk Soap should be used in conjunction to the balm for washing wounds and sore places. Excellent, too, for baby's bath.

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c box and Zam-Buk Soap at 25c tablet. Post free upon receipt of price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

Hennequin's Infant Tablets

Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she would not live. The Tablets cured her.—MR. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—MRS. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and prepay them. If your baby is not well send for trial package. Hennequin Tablets have the letter "H" stamped upon them—this is your guarantee. All dealers, 25c per package, or 5 for $1.00 sent postpaid to any address.

Majesty of the Law.

A good story is told of a judge who resides in the Ottawa district. Not long ago the judge's auto needed repairs and was promptly turned over to a garage mechanic.

It appears that in the course of testing the machine, after the repairs had been made, a young lady relative of the judge found the machine quite convenient, in fact so convenient that the auto was reported by an official of the law—who was unaware of its ownership — for speeding. Forthwith the judge summoned himself to court, mentally arraigned himself, exacted a fine of $20 and promptly paid it. Oddly enough the car was found next morning to no longer need testing.

WHAT I AM THANKFUL FOR.

I am thankful I live in this fair land
Where peace and plenty go hand in hand,
Where the stars and stripes wave over all,
On lowly cottage or lordly hall.

And as I look back o'er the past,
At those brave men before the mast,
With courage brave and wistful eye
They watched the promised land draw nigh.

Upon the rock they landed high
Above the ocean's waters dry,
With thankful hearts they bowed in prayer
To Him who held them in His care.

And when through toil and snow and rain
Their efforts seemed to be in vain,
With lifted hands they cried aloud
Oh Lord make not the snow our shroud.

But He sent the sunshine and the gloom
Of heavy winter passed full soon,
The corn was waving in the breeze
The wheat was golden in the sheaves.

And as they looked upon this land,
With joyful hearts and laden hands
They thanked the Lord with song and praise,
And now we have Thanksgiving Days.

HOW JESUS IS GOD'S UNSPEAKABLE GIFT

Salvation Is of God's Divine Love and Grace.

Misunderstanding of What Constitutes the Divine Penalty for Sin Has Misled Us In Respect to Every Feature of God's Program for Our Recovery From the Penalty.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Rochester, N.Y., Nov. 24. — Pastor Russell of Brook- lyn is here. We report one of his addresses from the text, "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift."

—II. Cor. 9:15. The Pastor said that Jesus, our Saviour, is God's great Gift, in whom is included "Every good and every perfect gift."

In order to appreciate the Scripture we must handle the Word of God honestly. We must recognize that our Lord Jesus is one person and the Father another person. The oneness between the Father and the Son is that declared by our Master Himself, saying that He and the Father are one in the same sense that He desires all of His disciples to be one—in mind, in purpose, in will, in effect.—John 17:21, 23.

The Scriptures declare that the Redeemer took the nature of man in order to redeem sinners; but that in Him there was no sin. Only a sinless one could give to God a Ransom for Adam, the perfect man, and thus redeem from destruction, not only Adam but all his posterity, involved in sin and death through him.

God set before our Lord a great joy, the influence of which led Jesus to endure cheerfully the bitter experiences of His earthly life. This joy is intimated to have been: (1) His pleasure in doing the Father's will; (2) His privilege of "bringing many sons to glory"—the Church; (3) His pleasure and joy of being by and by the world's Restorer, delivering them from the power of Satan, sin and death. Our Redeemer realized that His loyalty to the Father would require faithfulness even unto the death of the cross. "Wherefore," St. Paul says, "God hath highly exalted Him far above angels, principalities and powers, and every name that is named."

An Opposite Course From Satan's.

Pastor Russell then contrasted the course pursued by Satan with that followed by our Lord. Meditating ambitious designs, Satan found an opportunity in Eden. He beheld in our first parents a new order of beings designed to bring into existence a race that would fill the earth. Satan assayed to be ruler over this human creation; and by so doing, he not only became a rebel against God, but brought sin and death into the world.

Our Lord Jesus pursued an opposite course, and demonstrated His loyalty and obedience. St. Paul intimates that, although the Logos was much higher than was Satan, yet He was humble, and "meditated not a usurpation," as the Greek text declares. (Phil. 2:6.) He thought not of tak-course and demonstrated his royalty and obedience. St. Paul intimates that, although the Logos was much higher than was Satan, yet He was humble, and "meditated not a usurpation," as the Greek text declares. (Phil. 2:6.) He thought not by robbery to be equal with God. On the contrary, our Lord willingly accepted the Divine proposal that He should be humbled to the human plane for a time, in order to carry out the Father's Plan. After our Lord had suffered death on man's behalf, He was raised from the dead and highly exalted, as One pleasing in the sight of Jehovah, and given a position "at the right hand of the Majesty on High."

To the Church, Jesus is God's unspeakable Gift. He is indeed a Gift to the whole world, unspeakable in value, but He is more to the Church than to the world. To His footstep followers He is the "Captain of their Salvation," their Bridegroom, their "Elder Brother," their great High Priest. Through Him they are privileged to be the Royal Priesthood. Through the merit of the sacrifice of Christ, they are privileged to "present their bodies living sacrifices, holy, acceptable unto God."

The Pastor then said that Justice must be recognized in the Creator's dealings with His creatures. The Scriptures assure us that Justice is the foundation of God's throne. In the past, endeavors to harmonize Love and Justice with our great Creator's dealings with humanity have involved us in difficulty. We were assured by the prominent creeds of the world that God had knowingly and willingly brought mankind into existence under such conditions that the great majority would spend eternity in torture. We were unable to see Justice in any such arrangement. But while we desisted from criticising the Creator, we could not indorse such a course, nor could we see it to be in harmony with the Divine regulations governing ourselves.

Some, the speaker continued, knowing that the majority of mankind have not heard of the only way of salvation—through Jesus, are in perplexity respecting Divine obligation toward humanity. When we get the Bible view we see that God really owes His creatures nothing; that He has already given them all that strictest justice can demand for them; and that whatever He gives them now is of mercy.

The Scriptures declare that the world knows not God, and that only the consecrated Church see the "lengths, breadths, heights and depths of the Love of God," which passeth understanding. This class alone is in any sense prepared to give thanks to God now for His unspeakable gift. Their thanks go up, not only in words, but also in actions, which "speak louder than words." These thanks ascend as sweet incense to God as His blessings and mercies abound in all spiritual things toward them.

CATTLE MARKET.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 25.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Nov. 23 were 2200 cattle, 1975 sheep and lambs, 2250 hogs and 750 calves, while the offerings on this market this morning for sale consisted of 1500 cattle, 750 sheep and lambs, 1450 hogs and 325 calves. Although the supply of cattle was large and generally of a medium quality, a steady feeling prevailed in the market and prices showed no important change, as compared with a week ago. The weather was stormy, but notwithstanding this fact the gathering of buyers was large. A good trade was done, with a fairly active market. Picked lots of choice steers sold as high as $6.25 and full loads of good cattle brought $5.75 to $5.90 per cwt. Canning stock was fair at prices ranging from $3 to $3.50 and cows $2.40 to $3.15 for bulls per cwt.

There were no further changes in the condition of the market for sheep and lambs, but the feeling was strong and prices have an upward tendency on account of the falling off in the receipts and the continued good demand from butchers and packers. Calves were active. The tone of the market for hogs was stronger and prices advanced 25¢ per cwt. The demand from packers was good and sales of selected lots were made at $9 per cwt., weighed off the cars. Butchers' cattle, choice, $6 to $6.25; medium, $5.25 to $5.75; common, $3.50 to $4.50; canners, $3 to $3.15; choice cows, $4.75 to $5; medium, $4.25 to $4.50; bulls, $3.25 to $3.75; milkers, choice, each, $30 to $30; common and medium, $20 to $30; springers, $4.50 to $5.75; fresh cows and springers, $55 to $55.

Sheep—Ewes, $4 to $4.25; bucks and culls, $3.50 to $3.75; lambs, $5 to $5.50.
Hogs—F.o.b., $9.
Calves—$3 to $12.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Nov. 25.—Cattle—Receipts, 6300; fairly active and 15¢ to 25¢ lower; prime steers, $3.85 to $3.25; butchers, $5.75 to $3.50; bulls, $4.25 to $5; stock heifers, $4.25 to $4.50; shipping, $7.50 to $3.75; cows, $3 to $5.50; stockers and feeders, active and firm, at $35 to $75.

Veals—Receipts, 1000; active and fifty cents lower, at $4 to $10.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 2100 head; active and strong; heavy, $7.80 to $7.85; mixed, yorkers and pigs, $7.75 to $7.80; roughs, $6.85 to $7; stags, $5.50 to $5.50; dairies, $7.50 to $7.75.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 2900 head; steady; sheep slow; lambs, active; lambs, $4.50 to $7; yearlings, $5 to $5.25; wethers, $4 to $4.50; ewes, $3 to $3.75; sheep mixed, $3 to $4.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Cattle—Receipts, 18,000; market strong. Beeves, $5.35 to $11; Texas steers, $4.20 to $5.70; western steers, $5.50 to $3.10; stockers and feeders, $4.25 to $7.50; cows and heifers, $2.70 to $7.50; calves, $5.50 to $10.

Hogs—Receipts, 42,000; market weak; light, $7.45 to $7.80; mixed, $7.40 to $7.85; heavy, $7.35 to $7.85; rough, $7.35 to $7.55; pigs, $5.75 to $7.55; bulk of sales, $7.65 to $7.85.

Blackwood and Scott.

An offer of "The Tales of My Landlord" was made by Scott through the medium of Ballantyne. The terms were fairly stiff, but things were coming to a head when Blackwood, a man of letters and no toady even to genius, ventured a criticism which caused Scott to write to Ballantyne the following by no means urbane note:

"Dear James,—I have received Blackwood's impudent letter. G—d—his soul! Tell him and his coadjutor that I belong to the Black Huzzars of Literature, who neither give or receive criticism. I'll be cursed but this is the most impudent proposal that was ever made.—W.S."

However, "The Black Dwarf," the first of the proposed series, was published by Blackwood, but a connection relying upon such an agency as was afforded by "plausible James" was not likely to last, and suddenly, and without warning, the work was taken out of his hands and Scott was launched upon the path that led to the trials and tragedy of his later life.

Cure for Loss of Memory.

There is a cheap cure for the sudden lapse of memory. You have but to take three deep breaths and the memory returns. The late Canon Fleming put the cure to good purpose. He came up from Bath to Camberwell to preach. At Paddington he injured his wrist. Next day he walked from Paddington to the church. Sick with pain when he stood up in the pulpit and the hymn was being sung, he had forgotten his text and his sermon. He stood in agony until he remembered the cure, of which he had once heard. He took the three deep breaths, and the memory returned. The moral is, breathe freely.—London Chronicle.

Forging Roberts' Name.

Lord Roberts has narrowly escaped being victimized by a daring forger, for whom the London police are now looking.

A check to the value of nearly ten thousand dollars purporting to be signed by the veteran field marshal, was presented at Cox's Bank at Charing Cross, and had it not been for the astuteness of the cashier would have been duly honored.

He noticed a small detail in the signature, and when reference was made to Lord Roberts it was found that the check was a forgery.

A check form on Messrs. Cox and Co. had been by some means obtained by the forger, and he had then employed a member of the Veterans' Corps, in which Lord Roberts is interested, to go to the bank to cash it.

The old soldier, of course, had no knowledge of the fraud contemplated, and had simply accepted instructions to return to an hotel in Marylebone road with the money.

When the forgery was discovered Scotland Yard was informed, and they are now searching for the person who handed the check to the commissionaire. They have a description of this man, and find he left the hotel directly he found his messenger did not return with the money.

A Titanic Hero's Memorial.

Public memorials and statues are not managed very well in England—most of them, if not positively eyesores, are poor as works of art, and of little or no use to the community. Godalming is, therefore, to be congratulated on the form in which it has been decided to embody its memorial to John George Phillips, the wireless operator of the Titanic. While simple, it is to be both beautiful and distinctly useful. A cloister, with seats sheltered from the wind and rain, will enclose a small garden, and at one end the wall will have an arched opening out a view of landscape with a background of wooded hills. It is to be hoped that future committees appointed to erect memorials up and down the country will bear in mind this excellent example.

THIS PICTURE IN COLORS—FREE

This beautiful picture, in colors, free. To every member of the great 'Witness' Family who will send us a list of 10 names of boys who will be likely to sell the 'Witness,' together with 2 cents in stamps to cover the cost of postage, packing and handling, we will deliver—Free—the beautiful picture of 'Skating,' measuring 9x13 inches.

No barrier, however formidable; no obstacle, however insurmountable it may seem to the timid or faint-hearted boy, can bar the way to any boy possessed with honest and earnest enthusiasm.

Lincoln was consumed with a desire for education. He walked six miles to borrow a grammar, and after returning home with the precious prize, burned one pine knot after another while he studied its problems. He did not dream of the White House in those toilsome days and nights when his enthusiasm urged him on. Who shall say it was not the early enthusiasm that made him the liberator of millions of his fellow men and a hero of every boy the civilized world over?

Boys are always dreaming about genius, of what it can accomplish, and wondering why they do not have it. They do not understand, perhaps, that enthusiasm is the right hand of success, and that persistency performs miracles. They do not realize, as you do, that the great majority of men who have risen to be superintendents, managers and proprietors of great businesses, found their first opportunity at the bottom rungs of the ladder, and in their boyhood desires and pleasures.

The 'Witness' can help your boy and others. They will surely earn good incomes if they do a little work for the 'Witness' every week; but better than that—they will become more self-reliant and more manly. Read how easy it is to sell the 'Witness.'

Dear Friends:—I got my first ten papers this evening after school, and sold all in a few minutes of canvassing. Had in mind a number of people I was sure would buy, but did not get to them all. I enclose my order for 20 more papers. Yours truly, FLOYD EDWARDS.

Dear Sirs:—I received five copies of the 'Witness' yesterday evening. I sold them all in five minutes. I like my job fine. I hope I'll win the pony. Yours sincerely, NELSON VOGAN.

'Witness' sells fine here. I received 15 copies at 5 p.m.; all gone at 6 p.m. Enclosed find order for 30 copies. THOMAS PATTERSON.

NAVAL POLICY STILL BLANK

Ottawa, Nov. 21st. — Parliament's, opening to-day was a brilliant function, as befits the opening of the Parliament of Great Britain's first Overseas Dominion, presided over by a Royal Duke, the uncle of the King. In all its gorgeous state trappings it was a splendid piece of ceremony, beautifully staged and admirably acted.

But as an illumination of the course to be pursued by the Government and the work for which Parliament has been summoned it left much to be desired. The Speech from the Throne, as put into the mouth of the Royal Governor by Premier Borden, was little more than a series of platitudes, more remarkable for what it did not say than for anything it ventured to express.

There were cautious admissions that Canada had had weather during the past summer, that there had been a harvest and that a number of immigrants had been welcomed to our doors. These surprising pieces of information, coupled with a reference to the Duke of Connaught's trip across the continent, occupied the major portion of the speech. There were also admissions that Canada's trade—under the policy bequeathed by the Laurier government—had exceeded that of any previous year, and that as a natural result the reveques had been more buoyant than ever.

But as regards the question which has excited the greatest interest in Canada for many months past there was not the slightest indication that the coalition government had yet come to any decision. The naval issue was left just as blank as it was before the House opened—there was not one word in the Speech to show that the mountain which had been in labor for so long had even brought forth a mouse.

All that was vouchsafed to an anxious public was the fact that after Mr. Borden and his Ministers had spent so much time in England this year they had concluded something must be done by Canada. That conclusion has been reached years ago by the Laurier government and preparations made to take definite action—preparations which were only nullified by the overturn of the government in 1911 and the return of a government without a policy.

Referring to the visit of four of the Ministers to England the Address then said:—"Important discussions took place, and conditions were disclosed which in the opinion of my advisers render it imperative that the effective naval forces of the Empire should be strengthened without delay. My advisers are of the opinion that it is the duty of Canada at this juncture to offer reasonable and necessary aid for that purpose. A Bill will be introduced accordingly."

With such cursory generalities was this important matter dismissed. A supporter of the Laurier policy might well say that at most it amounts to a confession that at last the Ministry had wakened up to the fact that Canada should do something in the of naval defence. After all that has been said about an emergency the Address makes no mention of it. What the "reasonable and necessary aid" that Canada should give remains to be seen.

The whole phraseology bears out the expectation that the Government will seek to avoid the main issue of propounding a definite permanent policy by the easy, if comparatively naturally pleasing to him. If for any cause he is obligated to appeal to the people he wishes to meet as few constituents and groups as possible. Meanwhile he is apparently ready to sacrifice the people to serve his own Party ends.

SENATORS, NOT MEMBERS

Even a more sinister corollary to this avoidance of redistribution is the announcement of the government's intention to increase the senatorial representation of the West by giving Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta two more senators apiece. Apparently while the Premier is afraid to trust the people there to elect their own representatives he is willing to give them more representation—provided he can do the choosing. This is Mr. Borden's fulfilment of the Senate reform plank in his Halifax platform. The West is to be as long as possible deprived of its share in the work of the Commons, but a sop is to be thrown out in the appointment of half a dozen "discredited politicians" to the Senate. The Premier is evidently anxious to assist the hand of time by appointing more of his political friends to the Senate. This was adding insult to injury and glaring as a defiance of the rights of the people and the popular will, to omit all reference to any intention of giving the people the representation in the House of Commons to which, by law, they are entitled, and to specify an intention to increase the representation in the Chamber, in the selection of the personnel of which the people have no voice.

HIGHWAYS AID BILL AGAIN.

Apparently the Government has determined to abandon the ill-conceived Tariff Commission and T. and N. O. Railway Subsidies Bills, since they were not mentioned in the Speech. But it is announced that the Highways Aid Bill will be reintroduced "for the purpose of enabling the Dominion to co-operate with the Provinces" in the improvement of existing facilities. In this, as at last session, the Government will meet with the cordial aid of the Opposition. But if they persist in so framing the Bill so as to leave large loop-holes by which the money voted can be used as a species of national bribe to any constituency where a bye-election or other excitement may require special nursing, it will again meet with the opposition it deserves. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his followers strongly approved the principle of the Bill, but demanded that it provide for division of the money amongst the provinces according to population, and its expenditure by the provinces themselves in accordance with constitutional practice. This was refused by the Government, and on this ground the Senate rejected the Bill.

THRIFT BY MOTOR CAR.

South African Banks Have Hit on a Novel Device.

The banks in South Africa have a fleet of motors traveling the country districts, each of which is fitted up with all the necessary adjuncts to carry on an ordinary banking business. Each car contains a safe, a desk, at which two men can sit and shelves for the books. As an illustration of how anything in the nature of an innovation can spread if it meets a public demand the motor bank could not be surpassed. It is not yet twelve months since the first car set out on its travels into the Transvaal and Orange River Colony, and to-day there are some two dozen cars constantly traveling different parts of the Union engaged in this calling.

The pioneers had, as is often the case with pioneers the world over, to encounter great opposition. The Boer farmers were suspicious of the scheme. They had read and heard of confidence tricksters, and they felt doubtful as to whether these nice-spoken young men in the motor car did not belong to this fraternity. The name of the bank in gilt lettering on the car, and the production of duly seen.

The whole phraseology bears out the expectation that the Government will seek to avoid the main issue of propounding a definite permanent policy by the easy, if comparatively useless, expedient of demanding a contribution to meet a supposed emergency—the existence of which has been recently denied by Mr. Asquith, the Prime Minister, and Mr. Churchill, the First Lord of the Admiralty. A more extraordinary pronouncement on a subject which has so profoundly moved the nation and engaged governments could scarcely be imagined.

BORDEN BEARS REDISTRIBUTION.

Disappointment and indignation will be felt throughout the Dominion the Speech from the Throne has omitted all reference to the redistribution of the ridings consequent upon the Census of 1911. Ever since Confederation it has been the practice to have a redistribution as nearly as possible the first session after the Census. The desirability of this practice is easily apparent.

With the rapid growth of population inequality in the principle of "rep by pop" always springs up by between each decennial census, and these inequalities have to be smoothed out by redistribution. The custom has been to lose as little time as possible.

The reason is obvious. Parliament always has an uncertain tenure. At any time some crisis may develop demanding an immediate appeal to the country, as was shown recently in Great Britain when two general elections took place within a year. Such a condition might arise at any time in Canada, and if no redistribution bill is passed the election would have to be held under the old division, which would practically disfranchise a considerable proportion of the people and be most unfair to parts of the Dominion which have added large numbers to their population. There is the less excuse for this delay since the present census was taken in 1911 while this is the Session of 1912-13. If no redistribution is made at this Session it will therefore probably be 1914 before any law can go into effect which will equalize representation on a just basis. The census figures on which the redistribution is based have been in the hands of the government for a considerable time so that cause for delay is with the government, not with the census workers.

During his pre-election western tour Mr. Borden everywhere promised immediate readjustment of the representatives after the census, so that the increase of the population of the West could be taken care of. But the election occurred and the vote of the West was not very pleasing to Mr. Borden—hence his evident desire to delay giving it proper representation.

The present is precisely the time when under constitutional government no delay should occur in readjusting the representation. The Cabinet has not recovered from one crisis. Another may well develop any time in the disputes between the divergent branches of the coalition Government and its supporters over the Naval programme.

With the possibility of an appeal to the people to decide upon a matter of such epochal importance to the Nation in itself, and as a part of the Empire, it is ominously significant that Mr. Borden should have neglected to provide for the constitutional redistribution. The reason is not hard to see. The general result of last election was provinces themselves in accordance with constitutional practice. This was refused by the Government, and on this ground the Senate rejected the Bill.

The rest of the sessional bill of fare is to comprise a Bill to effectuate the reciprocal trade agreement with the West Indies, partially fulfilling the "wider markets" propaganda of the Liberal party; substantially aids to agriculture, the Bank act amendment, and a lot of minor and unspecified business. Under the spurring of an active Opposition the unspecified business may well prove the most important.

The coming week will probably be taken up with the debate on the Address in reply to the Speech, so that it may be a week or more before the Prime Minister is able to finally announce the expedient by which he hopes to tide over his cabinet naval emergency.

HOCHELAGA RESULT INSIGNIFICANT.

Great efforts are being made by the Conservative press to make it appear that the election of Hon. Louis Coderre in Hochelaga was a brilliant victory for the Conservatives and their "naval policy." As a matter of fact nothing could have further from the truth. Politically the election was a blank cartridge, as there was no contest between the parties, and, as usual, the position was forced by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Liberal chieftain took the ground that since the Government had no known policy on the only great issue of the day there was no reasonable ground on which to fight an election. Therefore he advised the Liberals of Hochelaga to refrain from entering the contest, and made it known that until Mr. Borden had plucked up sufficient courage to devise a naval policy and take the people into his confidence, the Liberals would not undertake to play Blind Man's Buff. The coalition government was left alone to try and straighten out the difficulty between the Conservative and Nationalist wings. The result of the absence of the Liberals from the fight was the entry of a Labor-Nationalist candidate. He was, of course, defeated by the Conservatives, who turned out in strong force, while few Liberals voted at all. The net result of the election is therefore really to emphasize the difficulties of the covert alliance between the Conservatives and Nationalists. Hon. Messrs. Nantel and Pelletier are still in the Cabinet, they still represent their nationalist pledges in opposition to naval expenditure generally, and especially contribution or anything else without a referendum. It serves to intensify the interest as to what part the Nationalist ministers will play when Mr. Borden announces his plans.

The comparative triviality of the election was shown by the fact that the two candidates together did not receive as many votes as Hon. Mr. Coderre alone in 1911, while on this occasion Mr. Coderre's vote was almost 1600 less than that given to Mr. Rivet, the Liberal candidate, in 1911. In September 1911 Mr. Coderre received 7178 and Mr. Rivet 5805. At the bye-election just completed Hon. Mr. Coderre received 4222 and Mr. Dvorn, (the Labor-Nationalist candidate) 2016. These figures make it easily apparent that very few Liberals voted, while the great majority of the electors did not consider the matter of sufficient importance to take the trouble to vote.

or conscience tricksters, and they felt doubtful as to whether these nice-spoken young men in the motor car did not belong to this fraternity. The name of the bank in gilt lettering on the car, and the production of duly attested authority to receive deposits and transact any other banking business was not sufficient to dispel the mistrust, and the pioneers returned from their first essay practically defeated.

Then the bank in question gave over the conduct of the operations to the local manager of the Johannesburg branch, and this gentleman, accompanied the next car that went out on what was beginning to appear as a forlorn hope. The manager was known to some of the farmers, and his interpreter was a shrewd man who knew Boer nature. The first farmer who was won over to making a deposit started the campaign on a satisfactory basis, and since then there has been no looking back. For a long time the trading stores have acted as banks to many of the less prosperous farmers.

The storekeeper reaped little if any benefit from this, and they were the first to come forward and point out the benefits to be gained by their customers if they would do business with the banks in town. Besides the Transvaal and Orange River Colony the motor banks visit the native territories. They are everywhere well received to-day, and though doubts were at first expressed as to the safety or otherwise of cars that were known to contain so much money traveling in these out-of-the-way places, there has never been any attempt at interference.

The cars have certain days for traveling certain routes, and the journeys are so arranged that each car reaches a village or point at night which is in railway communication with town, and the money received during the day is sent down by train.

Nearly all the business consists of depositing money, and many Boers, to whom the idea of entrusting their cash to strangers on tour would have seemed sheer madness a little while ago, are now anxious to increase their deposits as much as possible. It is claimed that this new plan is inducing the young men to practice thrift, and for this reason it is also welcomed by the older people, who look askance at the many temptations now cast in the way of young burghers to spend money carelessly.

THE THREE GUARDSMEN

By ALEXANDRE DUMAS

"The friend of the infamous is capable of everything."

"You mean George Villiers?" said Felton, whose looks became agitated.

"Whom Pagans and infidel gentiles call Duke of Buckingham," replied milady.

"The hand of the Lord is stretched over him," said Felton. "He will not escape the chastisement he deserves."

Felton did but express, with regard to the duke, the feeling of execration which all the English had vowed to the duke.

"Do you know him, then?" continued Felton.

"Oh, know him—yes, to my misfortune—to my eternal misfortune!" And milady wrung her hands. "Sir," cried she, "be kind, be clement. Listen to my prayer. Give me a knife for a minute only, for mercy's, for pity's sake! I will restore it to you through the grating of the door."

"To kill yourself!" cried Felton, with terror.

Some one was heard in the corridor. Milady recognized the step of Lord de Winter.

Felton recognized it also and made a step toward the door. Milady sprang toward him.

"Oh, not a word," said she in a concentrated voice, "not a word of all that I have said to you to this man or I am lost, and it would be you—you!"

Felton gently pushed milady from him and left.

Lord de Winter passed before the door without stopping, and the sound of his footsteps soon died away in the distance.

"If he tells the baron," said she, "I am lost, for the baron, who knows very well that I shall not kill myself man through the narrow opening. But he did not enter.

The next day, when Felton entered milady's apartments, he found her standing, mounted upon a chair, holding in her hands a rope made by means of torn cambric handkerchiefs.

He advanced slowly toward milady, who had sat down, and took an end of the murderous rope.

"What is this, madame?" he asked.

"That? Nothing," said milady, smiling with that painful expression which

At hearing that voice, so sweet and suppliant, at viewing that look, so timid and downcast, Felton reproached himself.

"Alas," said Felton, "I can do but one thing which is to pity you if you prove to me you are a victim! But you, madame, so beautiful in reality, you so pure in appearance, must have committed great iniquities for Lord de Winter to pursue you thus."

"They have eyes," repeated milady, with an accent of indescribable grief, "and they will not see; they have ears and they will not hear."

"But," cried the young officer, "speak—speak then!"

"Confide my shame to you," cried milady, with the blush of modesty upon her countenance. "Oh, never, never, never!"

"But to me, to a brother?" said Felton.

The young officer, in his turn a suppliant, clasped his hands.

"Well, then," said milady, "I confide in my brother, I will dare to!"

At this moment the steps of Lord de Winter were heard, but this time the terrible brother-in-law of milady did not content himself, as on the preceding day, with passing before the door and going away again. He stopped, exchanged two words with the sentinel, then the door opened and he appeared.

During these two words Felton drew back suddenly, and when Lord de Winter entered he was at several paces from the prisoner.

"You have been a long time here, John," said De Winter. "Has this woman been relating her crimes to you? In that case I can comprehend the length of the conversation."

"Well," said he on leaving will not escape this night!"

"If he tells the baron," said she, "I am lost, for the baron, who knows very well that I shall not kill myself, will place me before him with a knife in my hand, and he will discover that all this despair is but played."

In the evening Lord de Winter accompanied the supper.

"Sir," said milady, "is your presence an indispensable accessory of my captivity? Could you not spare me the increase of tortures which your visits inflict upon me?"

"How, my dear sister?" said Lord de Winter. "Did not you inform me that you came to England solely for the pleasure of seeing me? I want to show you the kind of passport which I have drawn up and which will serve you henceforward as an order in the life I consent to leave to you."

Then, turning his eyes from milady to a paper which he held in his hand, he read:

"Order to conduct to — The name is blank," interrupted Lord de Winter. "If you have any preference you can point it out to me, and if it be not within a thousand leagues of London attention will be paid to your wishes. I will begin again then: 'Order to conduct to — the person named Charlotte Backson, branded by the justice of the kingdom of France, but liberated after chastisement. She is to dwell in this place, without ever going more than three leagues from it. In case of any attempt to escape the penalty of death is to be applied. She will receive 5 shillings per day for lodging and food.'"

"That order does not concern me," replied milady coldly, "since it bears another name than mine."

"A name! Have you a name, then?" "I bear that of your brother," cried milady.

"Ay, but you are mistaken. My brother is only your second husband, and your first is still living. Tell me his name and I will put it in the place of the name of Charlotte Backson. Tomorrow this order will be sent to the Duke of Buckingham. After tomorrow it will return signed by his hand and marked with his seal, and four and twenty hours afterward I will answer for its being carried into execution. Adieu, madame. That is all I had to say to you. Tomorrow I will come and announce to you the departure of my messenger."

Milady breathed again. She had still four days before her to complete the seduction of Felton.

A terrible idea, however, rushed into her mind. She thought that Lord de Winter would perhaps send Felton himself to get the order signed by the Duke of Buckingham. Nevertheless, one circumstance reassured her—Felton had not spoken.

Soon after she heard lighter steps than those of the sentinel, which came from the bottom of the corridor and stopped before her door.

"That is he," said she.

And she began the same religious chant which had so strongly excited Felton the evening before.

But, although her voice, sweet, full and sonorous, vibrated as harmoniously and as affectingly as ever, the door remained shut. It appeared, however, to milady that in one of the furtive glances she darted from time to time at the grating of the door she thought she saw the ardent eyes of the vic-she knew so well how to give to her smile. "I amused myself with twisting that rope."

Over her head he perceived a gift headed screw fixed in the wall for the purpose of hanging up clothes or arms.

"What were you doing standing in that chair?" asked he.

"Do not question me," said the prisoner. "You know that we true Christians are forbidden to speak falsely. When God sees one of his creatures persecuted unjustly, placed between suicide and dishonor, believe me, sir, God pardons suicide."

Milady rose and stepped toward him, crying out with a vehement air:

"Let his victim to Baal be sent,
To the lions the martyr be thrown.
Thy God shall teach thee to repent.
From the abyss he'll give ear to my moan."

Felton stood before her like one petrified.

"Who art thou, who art thou?" cried he, clasping his hands. "Art thou a messenger from God, art thou a minister from hell, art thou an angel or a demon?"

"Do you not know me, Felton? I am neither an angel nor a demon. I am a daughter of earth; I am a sister of thy faith."

"Yes, yes!" said Felton. "I doubted, but now I believe!"

"You believe and still you are an accomplice of that child of Belial, who is called Lord de Winter! You believe and yet you deliver me into the hands of my enemies, of the enemy of England, of the enemy of God!"

"I deliver you up to Buckingham!"

"They have eyes," cried milady, "and they will not see; they have ears and they will not hear."

"Yes, yes!" said Felton, passing his hands over his brow, covered with sweat, as if to remove his last doubt. "Yes, I recognize the features of the angel that appears to me every night, crying to my soul which cannot sleep, 'Strike, save England, save thyself!'"

A flash of terrible joy, but rapid as thought, gleamed from the eyes of milady.

Felton saw it and started as if its light had revealed the abysses of this woman's heart. He recalled all at once the warnings of Lord de Winter; but, as if fascinated by this strange creature, he could not remove his eyes from her eyes.

Milady was not a woman to misunderstand the meaning of this hesitation. Before Felton replied she let her hands fall and as if the weakness of the woman overpowered the enthusiasm of the inspired fanatic—

"But no," said she. "The sword of the eternal is too heavy for my arm. Allow me then to avoid dishonor by death; let me take refuge in martyrdom. I implore you on my knees—let me die!"

from the prisoner.

"You have been a long time here, John," said De Winter. "Has this woman been relating her crimes to you? In that case I can comprehend the length of the conversation."

"Ah, you fear your prisoner should escape!" said she. "Well, ask your worthy jailer what favor I was but this instant soliciting of him."

"What favor, pray?" asked Lord de Winter.

"A knife, which she would return to me through the grating of the door a minute after she had received it," replied Felton.

"There is some one then concealed here whose throat this amiable lady is desirous of cutting," said De Winter.

"There is myself," replied milady.

Felton felt a shudder run to the marrow of his bones. Probably Lord de Winter perceived this emotion.

"Mistrust yourself, John," said he. "I have placed reliance upon you, my friend. Beware; I have warned you. But be of good courage, my lad. In three days we shall be delivered from this creature, and where I shall send her to she can hurt nobody."

The baron took the young officer by the arm, turning his head over his shoulder so as not to lose sight of milady till he was gone out.

Milady waited then with much impatience, for she feared the day would pass away without her seeing Felton again. But in an hour she heard some one enter.

"What do you want with me?" said she.

"Listen," replied Felton in a low voice; "I have just sent away the sentinel. The baron has just related a frightful history to me."

Milady assumed her smile of a resigned victim and shook her head.

"Either you are a demon," continued Felton, "or the baron, my benefactor, my father, is a monster. Tonight after 12 I will come and see and listen to you, and you will convince me."

"No, Felton, no, my brother; the sacrifice is too great, and I feel what it must cost you. No, I am lost. Do not be lost with me!"

"Be silent, madame," cried Felton, "and do not speak to me thus. If when you have seen me again you still persist—well, then you shall be free, and I myself will give you the weapon you desire."

"Well," said milady, "for your sake I will wait."

He darted out of the room. As for her, she returned to her place with a smile of savage contempt upon her lips.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

The Fifth Day of Captivity.

MILADY, being well prepared for the reception of Felton, was able to erect her batteries for the next day. She knew she had only two days left.

She should certainly return from her exile; she did not doubt that a single instant, but how long might this exile last? To lose a year, two years, three years, is to talk of an eternity; to return after the death or disgrace of the cardinal, perhaps; to return when D'Arctagnan and his friends, happy and triumphant, should have received from the queen the reward they had well acquired by the services they had rendered her!

At 9 o'clock Lord de Winter made his customary visit and examined the window and the bars.

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Years, Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Canadian women are continually writing us such letters as the two following, which are heartfelt expressions of gratitude for restored health:

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of womb and doctors did me no good. To sit down caused me pain and suffering and I would be so nervous sometimes that I could not bear to see any one or hear any one speak. Little specks would float before my eyes and I was always constipated.

doubt he would return the following night. During the day I had nothing to fear.

"Evening came, the ordinary events were accomplished. I only ate some fruit. After supper I exhibited the same marks of languor as on the preceding evening, but this time, as if I yielded to fatigue, I dragged myself toward my bed, let my robe fall, and got in.

"I found my knife where I had placed it, under my pillow, and, while feigning to sleep, my hand grasped the handle of it convulsively.

"At length I saw the lamp rise softly and disappear in the depths of the ceiling. At length I heard the noise of the door which opened and shut; I heard, notwithstanding the thickness of the carpet, a step which made the floor creak; I saw, notwithstanding the darkness, a shadow which approached my bed."

"Make haste, make haste!" said Felton. "Do you not see that every one of your words burns me like molten lead?"

"Then," continued milady, "when I saw him near me, stretching out his arms to find his victim, I struck him in the middle of his breast.

"The miserable villain! He had foreseen all! His breast was covered with a coat of mail; the knife was bent against it.

"Ah, ah!" cried he, seizing my arm and wresting from me the weapon. 'You want to take my life, do you, my pretty Puritan! Come, come; calm yourself, my sweet girl! You don't love me; tomorrow you shall be free.'"

"I had but one wish, and that was that he should kill me.

"Beware," said I, 'for my liberty is your dishonor. I will tell everything. I will denounce this palace of infamy. You are placed on high, my lord, but tremble. Above you there is the king. Above the king there is God!'

"Then you shall not leave this place," said he.

"So be it," cried I, 'then the place of my punishment will be that of my tomb.'

"You shall have no weapon left in your power."

"I will allow myself to die with hunger."

"Come, come," said the wretch, 'is not peace much better than such a war as that? I will restore you to liberty this moment. I will proclaim you a piece of immaculate virtue.'

"I will denounce you before men as I have denounced you before God!'

"Well, everything considered, you are very well off here. You shall want for nothing, and if you choose to die of hunger—why, that will be your own fault."

"At these words he retired. I heard the door open and shut, and I remained overwhelmed, still less, I confess it, by my grief than by the shame of not having avenged myself.

"He kept his word. All day, all the next night passed away without my seeing him again. I neither ate nor drank. I was, as I had told him, resolved to die of hunger.

"The second night the door opened. I was lying on the floor, for my strength began to abandon me.

"Well," said his voice, 'are we softened a little? Will we not pay for our liberty with a single promise of silence? Come, take a little oath for me

CHAPTER XL.

Means For Classical Tragedy.

AFTER a moment of silence, employed by milady in observing the young man who listened to her, milady continued her recital.

"It was nearly three days since I had eaten or drunk anything. I suffered frightful torments. At times there passed before me clouds which pressed my brow, which veiled my eyes. This was delirium. I heard the door open. Terror recalled me to myself.

"He entered the apartment, followed by a man in a mask. He was masked likewise, but I knew him.

"Well," said he to me, 'have you made your mind up to take the oath I have requested you?'

"My one word is to pursue you on earth to the tribunal of men, in heaven to the tribunal of God.'

"You shall be disgraced in the eyes of the world! Try to prove to that world that you are neither guilty nor mad!"

"Then, addressing the man who accompanied him:

"Executioner," said he, 'do your duty.'

"Oh, his name, his name!" cried Felton. "Tell it me!"

"Then, in spite of my cries, in spite of my resistance, the executioner seized me, threw me on the floor, fastened me with his bonds. A burning fire, a red-hot iron, the iron of the executioner, was imprinted on my shoulder."

Felton uttered a groan.

"Here," said milady, rising with the majesty of a queen—"here, Felton, behold my martyrdom!"

Milady, with a rapid gesture, opened her robe, tore the cambric that covered her shoulder and, red with feigned anger and simulated shame, showed the young man the ineffaceable impression which dishonored the beautiful flesh.

"But," cried Felton, "that is a fleur-de-lis which I see there."

"And therein consisted the infamy," replied milady. "The brand of England! It would be necessary to prove what tribunal had imposed it on me, and I could have made a public appeal to all the tribunals of the kingdom. But the brand of France! Oh, by it, by it I was really branded indeed!"

This was too much for Felton.

Pale, motionless, dazzled by the superhuman beauty of this woman, he ended by falling on his knees before her.

"Pardon, pardon!" cried Felton. "Oh, pardon!"

Milady read in his eyes' love, love!

She let one of those looks fall upon him which make a slave of a king. He no longer loved her—he adored her.

When milady appeared to have resumed by self possession, which she had never lost, when Felton had seen her cover herself again—"Ah, now," said he, "I have only one thing to ask of you—that is, the name."

"What, brother?" cried milady. "Must I name him again? Have you not yet divined who he is? He who protects the Protestants today and will betray them tomorrow!"

"Buckingham it is, then, Buckingham!" cried Felton, in a high state of exasperation.

through the floor. A quarter of an hour after it reappeared bearing my supper, and in an instant, thanks to the lamp, my chamber was once more lighted.

"I was determined to eat only such objects as could not possibly have anything saporific introduced into them. I drew another glass of water.

"After swallowing a mouthful or two it appeared to me not to have the same taste that it had in the morning. A suspicion instantly seized me. I stopped, but I had already drunk half a glassful of it.

"Half an hour had not passed when the same symptoms began to appear, only as I had drunk only half a glass of the water I contended longer, and instead of falling entirely asleep I sank into a state of drowsiness.

"I dragged myself toward the bed, but I could not reach the bolster. I sank on my knees, my hands clasped around one of the bedposts. Then I felt that I was lost."

Felton became frightfully pale, and a convulsive tremor crept through his whole body.

"And what was more terrible," continued milady, "was that at this time I retained a consciousness of the danger that threatened me.

"I saw the lamp ascend and leave me in darkness. Then I heard the creaking of the door. I felt instinctively that some one approached me. I endeavored to make an effort, I attempted to cry out. By an incredible effort of will I even raised myself up, but only to sink down again immediately and to fall into the arms of my persecutor."

"Tell me who this man was!" cried the young officer.

Milady saw at a single glance all the painful feelings she inspired in Felton, but she would not spare him a single pang.

"Only this time it was no longer an inert body without feeling that the villain had to deal with. I struggled. I heard him cry out:

"These miserable Puritans! I knew very well that they tired out their executioners, but I did not think they had been so strong against their lovers!" Alas, this desperate resistance could not last long!

"My first impulse on coming to myself was to feel under my pillow for the knife I had not been able to reach. But on taking this knife, Felton, a terrible idea occurred to me and did not leave me. It is of this that I now bear the punishment."

"Continue, continue!" said Felton. "I am eager to see you attain your vengeance!"

"Oh, I resolved that it should take place as soon as possible. I had no strength began to abandon me.

"Well," said his voice, 'are we softened a little? Will we not pay for our liberty with a single promise of silence? Come, take a little oath for me on the cross. I won't ask anything more of you.'

"Upon the cross," cried I, rising, for at that abhorred voice I had recovered all my strength; 'upon the cross! I swear to denounce you everywhere as a murderer, as a despoiler of honor, as a base coward!'

"Beware!" said the voice in a threatening accent that I had never yet heard. 'I have an extraordinary means which I will employ, but in the last extremity.'

"I mustered all my strength to reply to him with a burst of laughter. He saw that from that time it was war to the death between us.

"Listen," said he, 'I give you the rest of the night and the day of tomorrow. Reflect, promise to be silent, and riches, consideration, even honor shall surround you. Threaten to speak and I will condemn you to infamy.'

"Oh, leave me," said I. 'Begone, if you do not desire to see me dash my head against that wall before your eyes!'

"Very well; it is your own doing—till tomorrow evening then!"

Felton leaned for support upon a piece of furniture, and milady saw with joy of a demon that his strength would fail him, perhaps before the end of her recital.

"Buckingham is, then, Buckingham!" cried Felton, in a high state of exasperation.

Milady concealed her face in her hands, as if she could not endure the shame which this name recalled to her.

"But he will draw down upon his head the punishment reserved for the damned!" said Felton.

"Men fear him and spare him."

"I," said Felton, "I do not fear him, nor will I spare him. But how can Lord de Winter, my protector, my father, possibly be mixed up with all this?"

"Listen, Felton," resumed milady. "I had an affianced husband, a man whom I loved and who loved me, a heart like yours, Felton, a man like you. I went to him and told him all. He knew me, that man did, and did not doubt an instant. He was a nobleman, a man equal to Buckingham in every respect. He said nothing. He only girded on his sword, enveloped himself in his cloak and went straight to Buckingham palace.

"Buckingham had left England the day before, sent ambassador to Spain to demand the hand of the Infanta for King Charles I., who was then only Prince of Wales. My affianced husband returned.

TOPICS OF THE HOUSEHOLD.

Attractive Dishes Made With Salmon and Apples.

A ten cent can of salmon will make a dish that few persons can scorn. Have the fish broken into flakes and freed from skin and bone. Fry a couple of slices of onion chopped fine in butter and when it is nicely yellowed turn in the fish and a pint of milk that has been beaten with an egg. Add half a cupful of bread crumbs and season with salt, paprika and pepper. Some persons like a dash of thyme, but there is danger of using too much. Cover the top with buttered crumbs and bake an hour. Serve in the baking dish. If a little sugar is sprinkled over the onion before it is fried the flavor will be improved. Old cooks do this when ever onion is used in this way for flavoring.

Somebody has given an uncommonly tasty and very nourishing soup the name of "po' house" with no other reason than because it costs little to make. Parboil a cupful of navy beans with a little soda—the little dry white ones used for baking—and then boil them for an hour or so with an onion chopped fine, adding about fifteen minutes before the hour is up a tomato cut in pieces and a potato cut fine. Push the soup and vegetables through a strainer, season with butter, salt and pepper and serve very hot with croutons. Canned beans or home baked beans may be used for this soup. If a tablespoonful of butter rolled in flour is cooked in the soup for five minutes after it is strained the flour will thicken it ever so little and in doing so will

Now the cushioned floor seat has come to be counted one of the indispensable items of a well furnished drawing room of today. The growth of its popularity has been particularly interesting to watch, for the luxurious floor cushion of today is the direct outcome of the present craze for living in small houses and flats where space is limited and where an extra seat in the form of a low divan stool that practically takes up no room and can be stowed away in any odd corner is of the utmost convenience.

Go where one will, one is sure to meet the floor cushion in some new and elaborate guise. So much is this the case that it has suddenly sprung into popular favor as a wedding gift de luxe.

SIR RALPH WILL SPEND REMAINING YEARS IN LEISURE.

Widely Known Proconsul of Empire Who Has Just Resigned the Governorship of Newfoundland, Has Held Many Exciting Posts Since He Left College—Has Lived Mostly in Various Parts of Africa.

Sir Ralph Williams, who has resigned as governor of Newfoundland, is a colonial administrator of rather wide experience. During his diplomatic career he has held down some exciting jobs. He has been Treasurer of Gibraltar, sitting on the gate to the East; he has been Secretary at Barbados, and seen a quarter of the population swept off the earth by a hurricane; he has ruled Boers and blacks in Africa. It was in Africa that he learned his profession; Africa, which gave lessons to men like Cromer, Milner and the late Cecil Rhodes. His notions of the colonies as a young chap he got through extensive travel than from monocled opinions in the Oxford Union.

Sir Ralph first saw the dark continent in 1882, while lion-hunting with his wife, the first white woman to view Victoria Falls. About this time the British Government called him in to advise Sir Charles Warren in a territorial dispute in a district called Bechuanaland. So satisfactory was his counsel that he was made Resident Agent in the South African Republic. With the exception of brief residences at near points, Sir Ralph has lived in Africa. In 1901 he was made Governor of Bechuanaland, with C.M.C. as a decoration of merit. He assisted in throwing oil on the water in South Africa after the war.

In 1909, Sir Ralph was appointed Governor of Newfoundland. He is 64 years of age and is retiring from the public service that he may spend in leisure the years that yet remain of a strenuous career.

BALLROOM AT BALMO

Has Lost the "Horrible Tartan Times."

The ballroom at Balmoral, the usual tenants' dance recently, is a very different what it was in the reign of Queen Victoria, when, not find a point on it, it presented a most dingy appearance.

The walls in those days with what The Gentlewoman horrible tartan" designed Prince Consort. Queen Victoria never allow it to be removed often urged to do so by the Edward. So soon as the came to the throne he had of these hangings removed place thoroughly redecorated.

If a tablespoonful of butter rolled in flour is cooked in the soup for five minutes after it is strained the flour will thicken it ever so little and in doing so will prevent a watery separation of the liquor and the particles of the beans.

Fall apples may be used in a very simple pudding which is as delicious as it is simple to make. Line the bottom and sides of a baking dish with thin buttered slices of bread, turning the buttered side to the dish. Fill the center with apples chopped coarsely and season them with sugar, cinnamon and a little butter. Sprinkle the top with crumbs or cover with buttered slices and bake until the apples are tender. Turn the pudding on to a hot dish and serve with hard sauce. It will keep its shape and have a delicately browned surface. For variety the apples may be mixed with chopped nuts and raisins.

FLOOR CUSHIONS.

Fashioned From Brocades and Embroideries, They Furnish Beautifully.

No doubt about it, there's a growing popularity for the new floor cushions, which, having emerged from the dowdy insignificance of the ordinary hassock into things of beauty, are fashioned of rich brocades and lovely Elizabethan and Jacobean embroidery.

Little by little these have crept into favor among our leading furnishers.

Solemn Farces That Have Been Enacted in the British Navy.

It is a rule in the British navy that when a ship is cast away or otherwise lost a court martial must sit in order to apportion the blame. Sometimes these courts really try and condemn those that are held to be responsible. At other times their duties are, from the very nature of the catastrophe, more or less nominal.

Thus, when the Serpent was lost off the Spanish coast, a court martial assembled and solemnly "tried" three ordinary bluejackets, the sole survivors, although they of course had no more to do with the error in navigation which led up to the catastrophe than the man in the moon.

A similar solemn farce was enacted after the loss of the Captain in the bay of Biscay, when 483 officers and men lost their lives. In this case a gunner named James May, one of the eighteen who escaped from the wreck, was the nominal "culprit." The verdict was that the loss of the ship was due to instability and faulty construction. This really amounted to a vote of censure on Cowper Coles, the designer, but as he went down with the ungainly monster he had created he was beyond the reach of either blame or praise.

On another occasion a small "middy" of thirteen years of age was put upon trial, and once, it is said, a court martial assembled on a cat, which chanced to be the sole living thing found aboard a derelict frigate.

part in the Celtic literary revival, and has achieved no small measure of fame by his own writings.

He is one of six brothers who have achieved distinction in various walks of life. His father, Dr. John Gwynn, is a Biblical scholar of note, and for many years was regius professor of divinity at Dublin University. Mr. Stephen Gwynn's mother, who died five years ago, was a daughter of the famous William Smith O'Brien, who was sentenced to death for being concerned in the rising of '48.

Mr. Stephen Gwynn was educated in Ireland and at Oxford. He had a brilliant scholastic career, and on leaving the university entered the teaching profession. After a time he drifted into authorship and journalism. He has produced some delightful books of a topographical nature, and one remembers with pleasure "A Holiday in Connemara" and "Highways and Byways in Donegal and Antrim." Mr. Gwynn is an enthusiastic angler, and has written much on his favorite pastime.

A BOX OF SARDINES.

How to Test It and How to Tell the Kind of Fish It Holds.

Francis Marre gives the following instructions for purchasing a can of sardines:

The two sides of the can should be flat or concave. If they bulge out there is a likelihood that the can contains gases resulting from decomposition.

No can should be bought that has been resoldered.

The lettering on the can should be clear and distinct.

If there is a choice between soldered cans and cans sealed by crimping, the latter should always be preferred.

If the cans are soldered select those that have bright solder, which is less likely to contain lead and less likely to be bad.

After the box of sardines is taken home the can should be opened under water. If any bubbles of gas escape the stuff should be destroyed. The kind of oil used in preparing the sardines is of no great importance. The fish used are not, however, always true "sardines."

In the true sardine the dorsal fin is forward of the ventral fins and there is no wrinkled crest on the ventral line. The skin is smooth and bluish on the back. In the herring the dorsal is only slightly in front of the ventral fin and there is a wrinkled ridge behind the latter. The skin is brownish on the back, with a delicate network.

In the sprat the dorsal fin is in a line with the ventrals, and the crest behind as well as in front of the ventral fins can be easily felt by passing the thumb backward from the base of the head. The flesh of the sprat is rather hard.

In the anchovy the ventral crest is absent, as in the sardines, but the dorsal fins are behind the ventrals. The "chinchard," a small variety of mackerel, may be distinguished by its grayish color and the presence of two fins on the back extending nearly the whole length of the body. The forward fin has a spiny point.—Harper's Weekly.

Poachers' Tricks.

In these days of shooting in the north of England which for thousands of pounds to the sportsmen and sportswomen the season, and which are preserved from the depredations of poachers by vigilant gamekeepers might naturally be supposed to be a question, "Is poaching prohibited?" would be answered in the affirmative. According to the confessions of a experienced gamekeeper, however, a modern poacher is a very clever up-to-date individual, and, in all precautions, many of the sent to London markets are of other means than those which allows.

Many poachers have been known to shoot grouse for a week before moors are open by getting behind hills, so that the noise of the gun is lessened. Principally, they make their captures with snares. The dogs which many the poachers are special and very sagacious. The motionless or move forward crawling, or lie down on the right word from their master train these dogs to this perfection takes years of perfect work.

But it has happened that members have allowed, owing to physical inability to vote without leaving the bench which they sit.

The most remarkable instance of the exercise of that privilege was provided in the case of Mr. McManis, an Irish Conservative home ruler, who was elected member in the '70's. He had arms nor legs and had to be in and out of the House, and arranged that in every division tellers should approach him in what lobby he wished to vote. incidentally it should be said, had trained himself to write with the pen in his mouth, and was a ready and fluent speaker. last Parliament as a supporter of Redmond and the Irish National party.

ballroom at Balmoral, where the tenants' dance took place, is a very different place, from what it was in the reign of the late Queen Victoria, when, not to put too fine a point on it, it presented a ghastly appearance.

RAISING BEEF CATTLE.

Pure Bred Stock Offers Opportunity Even on High Priced Land.

The only possible solution of the problem which confronts and affects the whole country in a threatened beef famine during the next five or ten years is for the corn belt farmers to breed and raise more cattle on their farms and cut loose from the idea of buying cheap cattle for breeding purposes.

It is claimed that farmers will not undertake to raise beef cattle on high-priced land, because of the belief that it cannot be made profitable. With alfalfa, which will grow in most localities in the corn belt states, and by the use of the silo for the preservation of the entire crop of corn instead of only 60 per cent of it, as under present methods, and by the use of a good grade of cattle, particularly of herd leaders, the corn belt farmer is assured of abundant money profits as well as the preservation of his soil fertility, without which no system of agriculture can be made permanent or even of a long duration.

much more, it would seem that the present conditions and prospects offer the opportunity of a generation, if not of a lifetime, to the man who would raise beef cattle on his farm, and in answer to the objection that beef cattle cannot be raised profitably on high priced land it is only necessary to say that it is being done and that the careful methods necessary under present conditions net the farmer more profit than he formerly obtained under the conditions which surrounded the cheap beef steers.

shows sectionally the interior or main working parts. A triangular shaped strip of wood (A) extends across rear side of box, firmly nailed in place behind the spiked cylinder (B), which revolves and does the grinding, and another wooden strip (C), fitted with teeth like the cylinder, extends across front side and slides in grooves or small strips at ends of hopper as an adjustable concave.

Teeth may be twelve penny spikes, heads cut off and the remainder driven into cylinder, leaving about a half inch projecting, with ends filed sharp. The distance cylinder teeth are placed apart and position of movable concave, the teeth of which should intersect those of the cylinder, will determine the degree of fineness to which roots may be reduced.

The grinder may be made of any desired capacity. If all its working parts are well made with screws and bolts, it will be very durable and may be run at high speed.—Farm and Fireside.

SPREAD MANURE NOW.

Plow It Under Good and Deep and Watch Results Next Year.

Every up to date farmer or landowner knows that the keeping of farm land up to its highest possible state of fertility involves the intelligent use of large quantities of barnyard manure, says Professor Jones of the Idaho station. The question of when and how to apply it most advantageously is, however, sometimes a puzzling one. Particularly is this true in the case of the man who grows small grain only, it being well known, of course, that manure may prove a detriment rather than a benefit when its application is followed at once by a wheat or oat crop.

But to the man who makes a practice of growing a cultivated crop each year the disposal of the annual accumulation of barnyard manure presents no serious problem. He will apply the manure to the land which is to receive the cultivated crop.

There are two good reasons for suggesting that whenever possible barnyard manure should reach the fields in the fall rather than in the spring of the year. First, there is less waste of the elements of fertility by the leaching effects of the winter and spring rains; second, when applied in the fall and also turned under by fall plowing decomposition sets in immediately, progresses slowly during the winter, then proceeds rapidly with the warming up of the soil in the spring.

FOUGHT WITH KNIVES.

Sensational Duel in Arkansas' First State Legislature.

During the session of the first legislature that convened after Arkansas became a state, the new capitol, then still in an uncompleted condition, received a baptism of blood when, in 1837, J. J. Anthony, representative from Randolph county, was slain in a knife duel by John Wilson, speaker of the house of representatives, during an open session of the house.

In the course of a debate on a trivial matter Anthony offered a resolution, which was construed as a thrust at Speaker Wilson. The speaker became enraged and ordered Anthony to take his seat. Anthony refused to do so. This enraged Wilson still more, and, leaving the chair, he advanced down the aisle toward Anthony, drawing a knife as he did so. Anthony stated he had acted in jest, but Wilson refused to be pacified.

Anthony then also drew a knife and stepped from behind his desk to await Wilson's onslaught. Grandison D. Royston, who sat near by, thrust a chair between the combatants, but the ost remarkable instance of ise of that privilege was prothe case of McMurrough n, an Irish Conservative er, who was elected to Par n the '70's. He had neither legs and had to be carried it of the House, and it was that in every division the ould approach him and ask obby he wished to vote. ful methods necessary under present conditions net the farmer more profit than he formerly obtained under the conditions which surrounded the cheap beef steer.

As an avenue for money making for years to come, the raising of beef cattle on the farm will not be excelled by any other proposition except perhaps the production of dairy cattle in favored localities. For the general farmer throughout the country, the growing of beef bred cattle offers a greater opportunity than any other apparent source of revenue.

Now is the time to buy breeding stock, and money lies in the pure bred.—Kansas Farmer.

PREPARE FOR NEXT SPRING.

Ground Plowed In the Autumn Is Easier to Handle the Coming Year.

I find that soil ground broken in the fall is easier to work up in good shape with disk harrows in the spring than that which is freshly plowed in the spring, says a correspondent of Farm Progress. The furrow slices will be better settled down and easier to cut up with the disk than when it is just plowed in the spring and the furrow slices are loose and easy to be thrown about by disks without cutting them up fine. I do not claim that grass will not grow to some extent on the land plowed in the fall.

I am sure that a good job of plowing done in the fall—and what I mean is the furrow slice turned entirely over, with the sod in contact with the bottom of the previous furrows—will be in better shape after thorough harrowing than can be made with the same amount of work on spring plowed land.

Save all the liquid fertilizers on the farm in cisterns to be applied where crops are to grow. This will recover the greatest farm waste of our time.—James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture.

Spreading Lime.

Ground limestone can be spread quite evenly with an ordinary manure spreader. Cover the bottom of the spreader with some coarse cheap cloth (old sacks will do, letting them lap), leaving it loose so it can roll under and back with moving bed, tacking it at each end and probably in center. Gear the grader at its lowest rate, which is four loads per acre. Spread one-fourth of quantity of lime meal over bottom of spreader and it will be scattered quite nicely.—Rural New Yorker.

FOR GRINDING ROOTS.

Homemade Device Recommended in Place of Spade or Chopper.

An easier and speedier method of reducing beets, carrots, turnips and other roots to pulp than chopping up with a spade or the four bladed chopper sometimes used for this purpose is provided by the cheap homemade grinder illustrated.

Any poultryman or stock raiser can make it at trifling expense of time and work and use it with belt wheel for steam or gas engine power, or, if dethe fall and also turned under by fall plowing decomposition sets in immediately, progresses slowly during the winter, then proceeds rapidly with the warming up of the soil in the spring.

Nitrogen, one of the most important of chemical elements to growing plants, is thus made available for its use even before the crop is planted. Fall plowing, especially when left rough, also puts the soil in the best possible condition for the absorption and retention of the winter and spring rains.

Are you testing your seed for germinating qualities? It is a simple matter, and the state experiment station will send you full directions for doing it at home.

With the Feathered Folk.

For fattening chickens buttermilk has a feeding value above 30 cents per 100 pounds. This is considerably in advance of its value for feeding hogs.

One of the best things to keep chicks in good health is to have granulated charcoal before them at all times. It is the best corrector of the stomach that can be given them.

There is nothing that the chickens enjoy more when confined within their quarters than a bank of fallen leaves in which to scratch and explore for insects that are hibernating among them.

It is impossible to succeed in raising turkeys unless you have ample range for them. A wooded range is most suitable, and under these conditions the birds get much of their food without expense to their owner.

No other one thing will cause young chicks to make so fine a development, or make and keep the hens cackling merrily, while busily filling the egg basket, like animal food of some kind. When bugs and worms and grasshoppers and crickets are plentiful, how the feathered flocks grow and thrive!

Pronunciation in Ireland.

Many persons seem to see, or to hear, rather, something to be amused at in the soft Irish brogue. As a matter of fact, most of the words of the Irish "dialect" are not Irish at all, but the purest of English—English a trifle antiquated. It is true, but nevertheless the real thing. The ears of Milton, Dryden, Spenser and Chaucer would not have been surprised to hear an Irishman speak of "a rough say" or "a clane shirt." At the court of good Queen Bess the cultured Englishman carefully garnished his conversation with "goolde" rings and brave "swoordes" and bored his friends with accounts of the smart sayings of the "childre" at "hoom." This was the English originally imported into Ireland by the cultured Irish, and the Irish have found it good enough to preserve.—Chicago Tribune.

Anthony then also drew a knife and stepped from behind his desk to await Wilson's onslaught. Grandison D. Royston, who sat near by, thrust a chair between the combatants, but the latter struck at each other over the obstacle. Suddenly Anthony's knife was struck from his hand, and he was left defenseless. Wilson raised the chair and plunged his knife into Anthony's body, Anthony expiring almost instantly.

Speaker Wilson was immediately expelled from the house and Grandison D. Royston was elected speaker in his place. Wilson was indicted, but when tried in Saline county on a charge of venue he was acquitted on the ground of excusable homicide. The killing and the subsequent acquittal of Wilson caused a tremendous sensation throughout the state.—Farm and Ranch.

DEFIED THE KAISER.

A Pilot Who Knew His Business and Had Lots of Nerve.

In a fit of impatience because the speed of his yacht was slowed down on entering a certain harbor, the German emperor on one occasion tried to assert his authority and rang the bell for "Full speed ahead." To his great surprise, the pilot, an old Norwegian named Nordhuns, who knew the dangerous character of the channel, placed himself in the way and, leaning over the wheel, called down the tube to the engine room, "Half speed ahead—never mind the bell!"

"What! You dare to countermand my orders?" cried the impetuous monarch, again ringing the bell.

"Disregard the bell," calmly repeated Nordhuns through the tube.

For a moment the kaiser glared at the intrepid pilot, and then, drawing himself up to his full height, said majestically, "Go below, sir, and report yourself under arrest."

"Leave the bridge!" thundered the Norwegian grimly, as he grasped the wheel more firmly. "This ship is in my charge, and I'll have no interference with my orders from emperor or seaman!"

The officers on deck hurried silently aft, wishing luck to the sturdy old sea dog, who, knowing that he had the law as well as common sense on his side, stood at his post unshaken by threats, unheeding commands, and steered the Hohenzollern safely into port.

The next day the emperor came to his senses and decorated the pilot—the king at the wheel—with one grade of the Order of the Black Eagle and also appointed him his life pilot in Norwegian waters.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Seymour Company have their line to Newburgh in operation. The current was turned on on Wednesday and some of the Newburgh houses are now lighted with electricity. The first farmer in this section to make use of the electric current is Mr. Mark Hawley, who has had his house and barns wired and contemplates using motor power also.

The people of the Morven Circuit were greatly favored last Sunday in having the Rev. R. W. Woodsworth, of Toronto, to speak at their Missionary meetings. The fierce storm interfered with the evening meeting but the morning and afternoon programmes were carried through. In the morning the speaker discussed the subject of "Tithing" with telling effect. Numbers of his hearers no doubt resolve to adopt this bible plan of supporting the works of righteousness as a duty and privilege in their high position as God's stewards.

The musical event of the season will be the grand concert in Grace Methodist Church on New Year's night, in which the following artists, among others, will take part: Mr. Eugene Le Duc, Tenor, Ottawa; Mr. Arch. Beecroft, Bass, Kingston; Mr. Angus Orr, Baritone, Kingston; Miss Jennie Reid, Soprano, Toronto; Prof. Francis Fischer Powers, of the Columbian Conservatory of Music, Toronto. Don't make any engagements for this night. Everybody will go. The concert will be under the management of Prof. Powers. Watch for further particulars next week.

Addition to Napanee Church.

Plans are under way for an extension to the Presbyterian church at Napanee. The management is endeavoring to provide better accommodation for the choir, which is at the present time at one side of the place of worship. The addition will be erected back of the pulpit, making room for a suitable choirloft, choirroom and vestry. William Newlands, Kingston, is the architect, and it is expected work will be commenced in the spring. This will contribute greatly to the interior appearance and accommodation in the church, of which Rev. Dr. A. L. Howard is minister.

The Historical Lecture.

Prof. W. S. Wallace, of McMaster University, Toronto, gave an excellent lecture in the Historical Hall at the regular November meeting of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society on Friday evening, November 22nd. His subject was "The First White Men to Visit America." Prof. Wallace told of the much-debated question of the location of the Colony of Vikings or Norsemen in a very clear and interesting manner and explained carefully the reasons for believing that the Colony was on the North American Continent. All of his arguments were carefully explained and his frequent references to the "Wineland Sagas" when trying to verify certain statements were most interesting. The lecturer used the botanical arguments in trying to show that the Norsemen really did settle on this Continent and told of the interest that had been very recently aroused by the announcement of the Explorer Steffanson that he found whith Eskimos in the far north, believed to be remnants of the old Norse settlement. Prof. Wallace spoke for just one hour and everyone present thoroughly enjoyed the lecture. The President of the Society, after thanking Prof. Wallace for his kindness in coming to Napanee, announced that the next meeting of the Society would be held on Friday evening, Dec. 20th, at 8 o'clock, when Prof. J. L. Morrison of Queen's University would deliver his lecture on "The Highlands and Islands of Scotland." This lecture will be illustrated by lantern views. The meeting closed with "God Save the King."

Perry's Peerless Players.

A company of the very highest merit which opened a three nights engagement at the Brisco Opera House last night is one of the best to visit Napanee this season and they are being greeted by crowded houses in every town they play. Hazel Corinne, the charming little leading lady, has won a great many friends in Ontario. Her acting is wonderful and she always pleases the patrons.
Dan Mallay, the comedian, certainly knows how to entertain and you will be delighted with him. The comedy parts are never overdrawn and you will want more. These two clever performers are supported by a large company of celebrated artists, all from large companies. Mr. Perry carries special scenery and electrical effects for each production which is presented complete in every detail.
Several high class specialties are introduced between the acts by different members of the company that are sure to meet with your approval.

"Hello, Tim. How comes it that you aren't eating at home these days?"

"Thought I'd better keep out of the way awhile."

"Why?"

"Dad has promised Mary a new piano if she will learn to cook."

Heard It Himself.

"What is the matter, love?"

"No use for you to try to explain."

"But, my dear?"

"Don't 'my dear' me. I heard you say that you were going to buy a new ribbon for your typewriter."

Car Load of Marble Coming

I have just arrived home from the Vermont Marble Quarries, where I selected a car of the finest pieces of marble that has ever been quarried, which include all the latest designs for 1913. We are in the business to stay, and are going to make up the most attractive Monuments, Head Stones, and Markers that have ever been put out in Napanee.

We Have No Old-Fashioned Stock on Hand That We are Anxious to Dispose of

We have sold nearly all of our 1912 stock. By purchasing in immense quantities, direct from the quarries, we are enabled to offer our customers exceptional price savings on "First Quality of Monuments. We invite your inspection.
